This is the most common way -- it really depends on what you are doing exactly: (To explain, the example below will remove the last 10 characters which is what you asked for, however if there are some business rules that are driving your need to find a specific location you should use those to retrieve the directory location, not find the location of something else and modify it.)

How do I find the parent directory in C#? - Stack Overflow

An alternate solution of @kender. `import os os.path.dirname(os.path.normpath(yourpath))` where `yourpath` is the path you want the parent for.. But this solution is not perfect, since it will not handle the case where `yourpath` is an empty string, or a dot.. This other solution will handle more nicely this corner case:
