A 2007 International with a cummins isx 435 engine - ASAP

All engines are designed to bypass the rad via the thermostat in cold temps. Basically your water pump circulates water through the block, tranny cooler, cab and bunk heat exchange units, until it reaches a certain temp, then the thermostat will open up and let coolant into the system from the rad, and will lower the temp at this point and cause the thermostat to close again until it reaches ...
